Boa Construction earns quality certification

St. Louis Business Journal

Home builder Boa Construction is the first and only home builder in Missouri to earn the National Housing Quality (NHQ) certification from the Research Center of the National Association of Home Builders (NAHB), Boa said Friday.

The NHQ certification, which is currently held by just 50 home builders nationally, is part of NAHB's quality management program that recognizes builders and trade contractors for continuous improvement and customer satisfaction in residential construction.

The certification process involved a year-long audit of Boa operations, including a two-day inspection of its headquarters and production facility, according to a release.

Founded in 1981, St. Louis-based Boa Construction employs 56 people.
